

Unidentified Building, Oxley Hall Tennis Courts

Herrick Archives Number H 338

The only evidence found of the existence of this building is Photograph X 22943. It was located west and slightly south of the Oxley Hall tennis courts. These tennis courts were constructed in the fall of 1910 (L September 13, 1910) for women's use.

These tennis courts are shown on Map 191-53 (1913). By a study of Photograph X 22943 in connection with Map 191-53. the approximate location, as shown in the map below, has been established.

For Identification of other buildings shown, see Appendix A.

For indexing purposes. Building H 338 is arbitrarily listed at 1695 Neil Avenue.

The building was of one-story frame construction, and was about 20 to 25 feet square.

The date of construction of the building is not known, nor is the date of demolition. Pictures taken during construction of the Stadium (082) in 1922 show neither the building nor the tennis courts, but the scarred ground indicates recent removal.

The use of the building is not known. There is no evidence to connect the building to the tennis courts, except that physical proximity suggests the possibility.

The pile of dirt in the foreground of the picture presumably was from the excavation for the first unit of Starling-Loving Hall (176). This suggests the possibility that building was a contractor's office. Examination of the drawings sheds no light on this possibility.
